

Time & Place

The Ruse

Look up, don't you look down
This place is above
Not below the ground
The time is here The clock is run down
The dreaming is over
Not awake but somehow I'm found
Enough, did I do enough?
A lifetime of hiding catching up
It really caught up
If this is the light on my face
If this is the time and the place
Then I can look back on my days and know that I've been there
So now, in the light of this hour
All the ones that I've touched and I loved have gathered around
I wish they could see what I see now
They'd never believe what I see now
If they only knew what I found out there
If this is the light on my face
If this is the time and the place
Then I can look back on my days and know that I've been there
Wish they could see what I see now
They'd never believe what I see now
This is the light on my face
This is the time and the place
Then I can look back on my days and know that I've been there
And how can't you love what's been done
And how can't you love when you've moved someone
If that's all I have when I'm done
Then let me begin there
Let me begin there
